Tenth Harvest Queen Festivities Season's Biggest Event In Glades

Florida's Legislature Begins Thinking Space Age-Automation-Education-App.

By Representative Emmett Roberts

Thirty seven new members added to the usual excitement and confusion of opening day at the Florida Legislature. However, a series of events started as the Governor focused attention on the necessity for expanded educational programs if Florida is to continue to move forward.

For the first time a Governor's speech was made without a prepared script. He made a frank and straightforward appeal to expand Florida's system of high education as the most critical need. We live in changing times—new patterns must be created. Automation is here and Florida must move in the space age.

Governor's speech laid the foundation for the expansion of education, for the expansion of research, for the expansion of science, for the expansion of sports, for the expansion of culture, for the expansion of art.

It is the hope of the Governor that the people the path and goal we must strive to attain. He painted a desolate picture for the future if we do not provide now the needs. Issues of revenue bonds will provide for capital outlay construction.

All will design and create all styles, with Jeanne Cameron and fashion coordinator, Ronne Cameron will busy himself with publicity and promotion and Lois Kahn will direct sales effort.

All will be busy now turning out the first items known as "Shifts and Shift Shirts."

All's experience in the family business, coupled with a background of education and experience in the larger market, will be given to this experience with Catalina Sportswear recently.

Plans now in effect call for a flexible line of sportswear, designed for Florida living, and local residents will be given the opportunity to buy these items at these locations through Glades retail outlets.

Working thru wholesalers, the local group expects to have their items offered in the larger department and specialty stores of Florida soon.

The Organizing Committee of the District Committee of the Glades will be in charge of all activities of the Currency. The Currency has disapproved the application for charter.

The reason given is "the competitive situation that would exist if not warrant a third bank in the community."

Refunds to subscribers, after deducting expenses, will be accomplished no later than May 1st, 1963, says the announcement.

A meeting for the purpose of organizing and getting ready for the coming season of Glades Youth Baseball, will be conducted at McDonald Municipal shelter tonight at 7:00 o'clock.

All interested in the Little League should attend this meeting.

April 5 is the last day to register for the National Teachers Examination according to Elbert E. Bishop, Palm Beach Junior College Registrar who is in charge of the arrangements.

M. Bishop emphasized that no one will be admitted to the examination unless accepted for the test which will be given in the college library Saturday, May 4.

The Commons examination is to be administered from 8:30 'til 12:30.

Persons wishing to take tests in special interest areas will also report for the afternoon session.

Eude Haines, Eagle Scout of Troop 601, congratulates Glenn Wolf and Marilyn Felsing both of Boy Scout Troop 621, following a presentation ceremony in which they were awarded the highest honor given to a Boy Scout the Eagle Scout.

Both boys and their mothers were honored by receiving the highest award in scouting, the Eagle Scout Badge, several months ago.

Both scouts were recognized for their organization of scouts but scouting was not available when he was a boy. He pointed out that PT boat volunteers who had been boy scouts or sea scouts speeded up the program and made it more interesting training.

Haines' closing comment was: "If boy scouting had been available he would have sure been one."

Mike Gaskins, executive director of the Gulf Coast Council, was present for the recognition and spoke briefly on the importance of the Eagle Badge.

Gladie Pioneer and writer of many articles for the Glades, Lawrence E. Will was introduced. He gave an informal talk on advantages of being a Boy Scout. He stated that he had

The Board of Directors of FFVA has chosen these dates as being most suitable for the trade and members, generally," David reported.

Tentative plans call for a pre-convention Golf Tournament on September 23, three days of convention activities and a day of post-convention committee and allied meetings.

Close Ports To All Cuban Seatrade!

Congressman Paul Rogers has cited one of the major oil suppliers as being linked with an American citizen. Rogers then stated that if Castro's oil supply were crippled, the Cuban economy would come to a grinding halt.

In a speech before the House of Representatives, Rogers said that the American citizens, Michael Kulukundis of New York, and in British shipping concerns, which he be held accountable for some two-thirds of all current British shipping to Cuba, and approximately 30 percent of all current non-commercial shipping to Castro's island.

"Ironically, this same citizen has received some $32 million in U.S. government-secured ship construction loans," the Florida Congressman added.

Rogers then said that 80 percent of the non-communist tankers sailing in Cuba since the start of the revolution have sailed with Kulukundis' British operations. Rogers said that the British firm signed a long-term oil shipping contract with the Soviets in 1960, the same year

Kulukundis received some $23 million in insured loans from the U.S. government.

"Since January 1, 1963," Rogers continued, "there have been 10 British ships affiliated with Reithmans & Kulukundis, Ltd., trading in Cuban ports, all at U.S. ports. These dollars from our own profitable American cargo have gone to further the operations of an international shipping syndicate which chooses to associate with the communist while enjoying the privileges of freedom."

Roger then said that Great Britain ends its shipping to Cuba and the U.S. close its ports to nations which continue to allow free sea trade with Castro's communist island.

Twenty National Guardsmen have earned the Medal of Honor, the highest U.S. decoration for valor, during World War II. Three were from Ohio, three from New York, two each from Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, and Texas, and one each from New Jersey, Indiana, Idaho, Virginia, California, and Connecticut.

UNCLE DAN from DOOLIE says:

Dear Uncle Dan — Patrick Henry told some of our ancestors if he couldn't get liberty to give him death, he was just setting here reading the papers and studying my latest literature from the Department of Agriculture and wondering what kind of liberty he got now.

For instance, this Washington column writer says national, state and local taxes will take 34 cent of every dollar earned by American people in 1963, in other words, these taxes was taking 11 cents.

This column writer claims taxes has got so high they has given rise to a brand new profession in this country, the "tax avoidance expert." He allows as how the field of expertise is so great that don't do nothing but specialize in finding legal loopholes avoiding taxes. He told about one big manufacturer that had to pay these taxes because buys full time. The manufacturer explained that it pays better, after you reach a certain point, to find ways of getting out of taxes than it does to earn more money for the company.

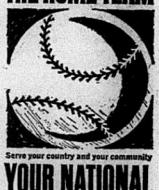

And I ain't the only one in this campaign they's going to now to cut taxes. What they take off here they'll put on there and by 1964 the tax take will be up another 2 cent on the dollar. And we have 100 percent that new car bumper sticker they say is going around the country: "A vote for Anybody is A Vote For More Taxes."

And they was a couple of days ago in the news from the Department of Agriculture this week. First off, they was a small item announcing that the price of elephants has doubled since 1952 and was climbing all the time. When that item gets in the newspaper and folks starts hoarding elephants things will git pretty crowded.

But the most serious item was about those science fellers at Kiplinger's who were hitting on a discovery in wheat that might produce 100 to 150 bushels to the acre. About the best you can git now is 40 to 50 bushel. We already got Government stored from Alabam to the States of Library and if the yield gets up to 150 bushel a acre it could cause a national panic. It looks like them science fellers would spend their time working on the next discovery something like gasoline that's going 150 miles to the gallon, or a woman's hat that would last from Christmas plum through Easter. But, like Franklin Roosevelt said, abundance is our biggest asset, and I reckon that includes taxes and whatnot.

Yours truly,
Uncle Dan

Watch The Vaccines Checklist For Adults

Vaccination shots and boosters to children can't last forever, as adults people seem to think. Changing Times, the Kiplinger Magazine, in its current issue includes this checklist for up-to-date protection for adults.

Tuberculosis — Immunity lasts three to five years and everyone should get a booster that often.

S Smallpox — Immunity lasts about three years. Revaccination is necessary for travel abroad, especially in other special circumstances.

Diphtheria — Booster shots recommended every three to four years.

Polio — The length of immunity is not known. At the very least, get a booster once after the first series of shots and consult your doctor about needs in later years.

Influenza — When an epidemic is due — or better yet, routine fall — get the flu vaccination recommended by your doctor.

Whooping cough. Adults don't ordinarily need immunization against pertussis if a full course of shot or booster were taken in childhood. Otherwise, it's not too late to start.

Three more, for foreign travelers, are: yellow fever — a shot every six years for travel in areas where it is prevalent; typhoid — a single oral booster after a primary course of three inoculations; thus, a booster every four years after a primary course of two inoculations.

"Rockin-Chair Money" Slightly Up Here

Unemployment Compensation insurance payments to Florida jobless dropped $423,235 from January 5 to $3,036,840 to a total $2,613,805 in February. State Industrial Commission Chairman George W. Brown reported today.

Brown pointed out there was also a significant decrease in the number of initial and continued claim for unemployment compensation, and also in the amount of unemployment compensation benefits paid in February from the preceding month. This was due to less working days in February and to the regular seasonal peak of employment in the state," he said.

All seems to be well now, showed a decline in the initial claims load except citrus canning.

Belle Glade is among the nine offices with increases, up $185 to $3,341.

ed as an editorial, but was assumed to be a straight news story.

Palm Beach County is going to have a two-party system. This will be true even if the Belle Glade Herald spells republican all in small letters and capital in Democratic.

Give the G. O. the shaft in your editorials, but please try to be objective in front pages news stories. I am sure that the citizens of Belle Glade will trust the paper a lot more if this policy followed.

I speak only for myself and would like to have this letter inserted in the paper if it is deemed journalistically good enough.

West Of The Wind

By Wayne Wood

Where do I live? Ask the eagles, They will know.
Or the swallows?
They, too, know.
For I am freedom.
Keeper of the trickling waters,
Tender of the rolling prairies,
Seeker of the sunrise,
Loving maker am I.

Where I have trod, mountains lie in rubble;
Where my steps have fallen, life has blossomed anew;
Where my might has cast its shadow,
Temples have dwindled,
Eloods subsided,
And all that be fair and good hath reigned.

Seek me not, for I am nowhere,
Call me not, for it shall go unanswered.

Search not, for you shall find me.

Only where no mortal ever dreamed.

Yet, I am with you, beside you;

Showing you life as meant to be,

Care not; breathe deep and free!

And sigh.

As passed, I noticed that

Worm was becoming more affectionate toward me. When I bent down to pick him tank off a branch in his glass tank home he'd stick his head out in greeting.

This worm actually liked to be petted on the top of his silky green head.

Not everyone felt the same as

I did about Worm. Quite often

my mother would spy Worm perched upon my bony shoulder.

"Eeeee," she'd scream. "Get that horribil bug out of here."

Worm, who was completely unshaken by the ordeal, and forgave my mother. Golly, she just didn't understand, that's all!

"Any insects brought to class will give you extra credit," an-

young biology teacher one

Wednesday. A brilliant smile glowed in my face. And I could bring Worm! Oh, boy! Did I ever glad to be alive.

Call loud to the wild goose,

Hear her echo.

Delight to the rising sun

And blend its hues with those,

your own;

Fall not,

But rise and go with me:

Into the portals of pleasure,

Into the halls of contentment,

Into the chambers of freedom,

Somewhere . . .

West of the wind.

Mary had a little lamb;
A little lamb, a little jamb;
A little egg, a little toast;
A pickle and a great big roast;
An ice-cream soda topped with fizz
And man how sick our Mary is.

The Gossiping Gandy

Okay, here's this weeks gossip. Interested? Sure you are. Read on.

Francis B., what's the latest scoop on Gandy? Judy A. seemed to be wearing an extra big smile weekend before last. Could Kenneth have been home? Josephine C. and Robert B. have been seeing quite a bit of each other lately. And we heard Betty A. G.'s neighbors complaining about the racket at her house Friday night? What was going on, Marci G.? It's been reported that a certain group of girls from West Palm Beach surprised her Friday. And speaking of West Palm, didn't I see you there, Janie L? Have you noticed Lu Alice C.'s new round gadget that she has hanging around her neck? I wonder if you can call that playing second fiddle, would you? It seems that several teachers are also coming out with new things, such as Mrs. P. Smith's pink hair, and Mrs. F. D. Tom's new hair style. Agent 56 reports that Michelle C. has been talking to Douglas Wedworth quite a bit. Likewise with Sharon W. and Horace W.

Future
Your Future Is

English

By Professor Robert G. Flick
JACKSONVILLE UNIVERSITY

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of special articles on college majors being distributed to high school newspapers by Jacksonville University, Jacksonville, Fla.

Why would anyone want to major in English? What do they do in college — diagram sentences and study rules, then sit around and think they're being busy about it? "ain't?" How to become a "cain't?"

Described in this way (and that may be the grammar or literature of some), a major in English sounds like a major for misfits, wall-flowers, or pedants. But, what? An English major is not a pedant. All the people come to feel they're cut out for such a life?

More courses in grammar or literature, and in reading and writing, starting with surveys of English and American literature, advanced courses correlated to a particular form (such as the novel, poetry, or drama) and ending with a thesis or period course concentrating in the literature of a given century.

PREPARATION

When you come to realize that literature is really this, a major in English will affect all aspects of your future existence, the record of all men that have ever lived, and it is even less trifling to you than if you think of it in terms of nouns and verbs. It is a state encompassing all aspects of human existence, the record of which men have thought and felt.

PROFESSIONS

When you come to realize that literature is really this, a major in English will affect all aspects of your future existence, the record of all men that have ever lived, and it is even less trifling to you than if you think of it in terms of nouns and verbs. It is a state encompassing all aspects of human existence, the record of which men have thought and felt.

RECREATION

In preparation for this kind of study in college, you should take as much English as you can in high school. Foreign languages give a person his knowledge of the world, and his knowledge of language structure and it is required for most Bachelor of Arts degrees. French and German are the most popular foreign languages, the English major. History is important because it helps us to see life, our lives.

Editor of the RAM-PAGE:

On some rare occasions, a good editor will be asked to hear the air grilles and hardships. After hearing the long list of grievances, one must conclude that some are definitely justifiable while the others are not. Just recently I participated in one of these healthy discussions, and I fully agree with those who voiced the opinion that we shouldn't be restricted because of the ticklish nature of passing grades, or the respect of past classes; for even the Bible teaches that we will not be punished for the sins of others. But, actually, the main thoughts presented throughout the discussion could be summed up in one sentence at BGHS we have work too hard and our work, too often interferes with our good times. I feel that the idea stated in the above summary needs to be re-examined.

We all enjoy recreation and having fun, but our lives shouldn't rotate around a good time. Recreation is a necessary evil, but it is getting too far when we have to look like living wolves because we can't live down in the green pastures of unlimited luxury and ease.

If we want anything worse, we have to work for it.

Patrick Henry wisely said, "Give me liberty or give me death." Successive generations said, "Give me liberty," while everyone else said, "Give me freedom." F. D. R.'s "New Deal" has clamored, "Gimme!" And today in BGHS we seem to be echoing the battle cry, "Gimme!" We want everything given to us on silver platters and "come hall o' hogget" when we're going to have our fun. And we expect our business for recreation too but many students (and adults, for that matter) have adopted an attitude of "Good time today, good time tomorrow."

Girls sure are wonderful.

On some rare occasions, a good editor will be asked to hear the air grilles and hardships. After hearing the long list of grievances, one must conclude that some are definitely justifiable while the others are not. Just recently I participated in one of these healthy discussions, and I fully agree with those who voiced the opinion that we shouldn't be restricted because of the ticklish nature of passing grades, or the respect of past classes; for even the Bible teaches that we will not be punished for the sins of others. But, actually, the main thoughts presented throughout the discussion could be summed up in one sentence at BGHS we have work too hard and our work, too often interferes with our good times. I feel that the idea stated in the above summary needs to be re-examined.

We all enjoy recreation and having fun, but our lives shouldn't rotate around a good time. Recreation is a necessary evil, but it is getting too far when we have to look like living wolves because we can't live down in the green pastures of unlimited luxury and ease.

If we want anything worse, we have to work for it.

Patrick Henry wisely said, "Give me liberty or give me death." Successive generations said, "Give me liberty," while everyone else said, "Give me freedom." F. D. R.'s "New Deal" has clamored, "Gimme!" And today in BGHS we seem to be echoing the battle cry, "Gimme!" We want everything given to us on silver platters and "come hall o' hogget" when we're going to have our fun. And we expect our business for recreation too but many students (and adults, for that matter) have adopted an attitude of "Good time today, good time tomorrow."

Girls sure are wonderful.
